

~~~~~
Grayed areas are non-speaking parts of the show.

Introduction:

O.K. Ladies, you are about to witness, in person, the Trashy, "R" Rated Fashion Show. Some of you may be offended or shocked by what you're going to see here today and I must admit, it IS going to be trashy – and "R" rated. So, brace yourself

Here comes our first model.

Aluminum Cans Outfit:

It's Candy Canworthy. She's wearing a stylish blue polka dot dress, a hat with pull-tab trim and a purse fashioned from a #5 can. Her outfit represents a favorite of men all around town ... the aluminum can. These cans are usually turned up ... guzzled ... then pitched, but not always in a recycling bin. They serve their purpose well, delivering a cooling beverage, but then they are tossed aside. Soda cans, juice cans and food cans also show up as litter. Instead of ugly litter, these cans should be recycled. Thank you, Candy Canworthy.

Paper Products (newspaper):

Penny Papermate is our next model and she is wearing a stunning 2-piece outfit that complements her figure along with a visor trimmed with paper and a purse made from newspaper bags. The print is beautiful on Penny, but we certainly don't want it in our landscapes! The same papers you see here can be found crumpled, shredded, wadded, tossed, thrown out, or blown out - all over our county. First a newspaper, a letter, or a magazine - Now litter. Regardless of how news worthy, important or beautiful these papers started out, they end up trashed. We all know "trashed" is trouble. Thank you, Penny Papermate.

Straws:

Next is Suzie Strawmore. She's modeling a cleverly designed caftan along with a straw hat and purse. This tropical inspired outfit is a summer wardrobe necessity here in South Florida. Her straws are certainly well placed, but beware - not all straws are placed properly. Some will poke themselves into just about anything. Their slender little forms are in great demand ... until the drinking is over. Then the trashing begins and they join the paper slips that once covered them, the companion lid and the host container ... littering the landscape. Please don't let this happen to your straws. Thank you, Suzie Strawmore.

Obsolete video movie tape

Tilly Tapeless is wearing a fashionable flapper style dress along with a matching hat and necklace that is just the ticket. This outfit represents little litter lightweights – the once coveted, now obsolete video movie & cassette tapes. They end up wherever the winds of chance take them. Tossed, thrown, blown, strewn. They fly, whirl, twirl and spin - moving about lightly and landing everywhere. They are a pick-up hassle to anyone trying to contain or control their collection. Thank you, Tilly Tapeless.

Let's get our models back out here for a big round of applause (Clap, Clap);

The models come out to take a final bow. Now the special "R" rated surprise is revealed

Each model is carrying a sign (4 signs – one for each model)

-----

Model #1 carries a sign that reads - "R" Rated

Model #2 carries a sign that reads - Recycle

Model #3 carries a sign that reads - Reuse

Model #4 carries a sign that reads - Reduce

For their final bow, they stand in line so that the signs read across

"R" Rated - Recycle - Reuse - Reduce

So there you have it ladies, The Trashy, "R" Rated Fashion Show.

Now you know the secret to being "R" rated.