Therapy Vest

General Federation of Women's Clubs members are invited to sew a vest with removable weights for children to wear when receiving occupational therapy.

What is the need?

- Children who are born with/or develop physical and developmental disabilities often show sensory integration difficulties. Sensory integration is the ability to take in information through the senses (touch, smell, taste, vision, and hearing) and movement, to put together prior information, memories, and knowledge – then store that information in the brain. In addition, the brain is responsible for such things as coordination, attention, autonomic functioning, emotions, and memory
- A child with sensory integration dysfunction cannot respond to sensory information and use it to behave in a meaningful, “typical” way.
- Occupational therapy is recommended when a child shows that he/she has sensory integration difficulties. To help a child gain a better sense of their own body and where they are in space, a therapist will recommend the child wear a therapy vest with weights to perform small tasks
- By wearing a therapy vest, the child feels more calm and secure in their daily activities.

Sewing a Therapy Vest

- Any commercial pattern may be used, sized for small, medium and large children such as Simplicity #7357 or #6336. (The patterns could not be included, due to copyright restrictions by pattern companies).
- Denim or other strong fabrics suggested. Solid colors or unisex designs preferred.
- The vest can be lined with brushed cotton, flannel or any soft fabric. Solid colors or unisex designs preferred.
- Velcro closures in front of the vest suggested.
- Sew four or five inside pockets at the inside bottom of the vest. Pockets will hold small weights or beanbags. Attach pockets inside individually or when cutting out the pattern, extend the bottom of the vest, turn up and stitch to create pockets
- Make or buy small weights to fit in pockets. Weights can be approximately four to eight ounces each, filled with small pellets, usually available at craft stores (no rice or beans). Any design or shape welcome.

Completed Vest

When you have completed your vest (s) contact Joan Fishman at Easter Seals headquarters at the address below and you will be connected with an Easter Seals near you. (However, if there is not an Easter Seals office near you, we will ask you to mail the vest (s) to another Easter Seals. They will certainly welcome your efforts!).
